

Innovation in bike design, race clothing aerodynamics, and other areas has become a necessity in competitive cycling in order to stay competitive. Some teams and nations have substantial resources to pay for this work, but many do not. Cycling Canada are pursuing innovation and development using a collaborative strategy and focused prioritization that may be relevant to other teams. In addition, lessons will be shared from other teams and sports that have shaped Cycling Canada's approach to implementation of new products.